The Protest Show at Ink Spot Press

Reception and gallery talk: September 22, 2019, from 3:00 to 5:00 pm

INK SPOT PRESS of Baltimore presents THE PROTEST SHOW! Printmakers from our workshop abandon the art-for-art's-sake approach to image making, and put their hearts on their sleeves, with this timely show.

While Ink Spot Press is dedicated to experimentation and self expression, we also feel strongly about the issues that affect us all. Primary among these is social injustice, which as Baltimore residents we witness, and experience, every day.

The graphic arts have a long and proud history of activism. The Protest Show gives us a chance to stand up and make our feelings known, through the medium that we know best. The reception on Sept 22nd will offer a chance to meet the artists and there will be an informal panel discussion at 4:00.

Ink Spot Press was created in the tradition of the painter-printmaker: artists who work in the medium of printmaking, who may enlist the collaboration of a master printer to realize their own artistic vision in print.

The gallery affords the workshop a chance to showcase the results of this collaboration. Ink Spot Press shows always include some sculpture as we believe there is a close relationship between sculpture and printmaking, particularly intaglio printmaking which is our specialty.
